

Have Your Say: Should contractors blow the whistle on projects that go wrong?

If a project is going bad, and you think you know what's wrong, what should you do?

You don't want to get your manager mad at you, but you also don't want the project to go south and lose the work?

Worse still, you could be held legally responsible, under certain circumstances, if a project goes wrong and it's shown that you could have done something about it. This is a matter of individual cases--there is no broad 'duty to warn' as there is in medicine, for example--but if the conditions are right, you could find yourself with a lawsuit.

Have you ever found yourself in this position? How did you handle it?

Published: Monday, April 07, 2008

Tweet

© 2011 All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or in part without permission is prohibited. Please see our copyright notice. If you want to use any content you have seen on this site then please request our media pack and ask for details of our Content Licencing Service.

Add Your Comment

Also of interest...

Related Guides:

- Tips for long term successful contracting
- Keeping Your Skills Updated
- Successful Contracting – The Importance of a Professional Sales Approach
- 10 Tips For First Time Contractors
- How to Find a Contract

Related Calculators:

- Contractor Financial Profile Calculator
- Contractor Calculator
- Contract Comparison Calculator
- Target Income Calculator - Contracting

ABCe verified website - last audit confirmed 130,682 monthly unique visitors

© Copyright 2011 Byte-Vision Limited UK. All rights reserved Copyright notice